Walking and shoes in eighteenth-century London

A look at changing fashions in footwear and leisure

A It was difficult to get about in eighteenth-century London. During the first half of that century, the physical mobility of the upper classes in the city had been considerably restricted: the poor condition of the streets did not allow 'walking for pleasure' outside private parks or pleasure gardens. Streets were dirty, rubbish was everywhere and the British climate did not help. Walking could be a risky business. The terrible state of roads, always flooded and muddy, created a metropolitan world of shoe cleaners and street sweepers.

B References to walking are not abundant in early eighteenth-century texts. This is truer for urban spaces than for places in the countryside, where country life had always been dominated by a lifestyle of outdoor activities. For instance, in eighteenth-century London, a sightseer's experience was restricted to touristic places and involved journeys by a series of boats and coaches. Walking was considered to be an activity for the poorer members of society — or simply those who could not afford a coach.

C This situation underwent a sudden improvement in the mid-eighteenth century, with measures implementing the provision of public spaces in which to walk. The first legislation concerning paving in London was passed in 1762, and during the following decades similar laws were enacted in many cities. By the end of the century, areas for walking were commonplace, and far more people were enjoying the pastime than before. Sophie von La Roche writes about metropolitan street life in the diary of her visit to London of 1786. She comments on how many more pedestrians there were on the broad, clean pavements, alongside the houses where, she says 'many thousands of neatly clad people, eminent men and dressy women, pursue their way safe from the carriages, horses and dirt'. Although the pastime of walking was pursued only in specific spaces designed for the purpose, the number of these spaces increased as the nineteenth century approached. Travelling on foot became smoother and less dangerous.

D Attitudes toward walking through public spaces and their changes over time were visible in the practical designs of fashionable footwear. Protective overshoes and other devices designed to keep feet above the dirty and wet ground soon disappeared, and ease of mobility increased. In the early eighteenth century, the look of men's and women's shoes started to diverge in appearance as a distinction between male and female footwear filtered into production. Contemporary descriptions of the boot and shoe trade underlined the differences between ladies' shoemakers and men's shoemakers too.

E The production of men's and women's footwear required different skills, as the products were essentially different. Men wore more sober footwear, not unlike modern shoes. Their shoes were entirely made of leather, which provided resistance to rain, mud and bad weather. Women's shoes had uppers made of textiles — silk, satin or cloth — and their resistance to bad weather and dirty streets was limited. Only the lower ranks of women wore leather shoes of a form similar to men's. The high-quality shoes for women were often embroidered and were normally worn with protective overshoes, as they were prone to being damaged or disfigured by the conditions of the time.

F The shoes of men and women related to their more general clothing in different ways. Wealthy women's footwear harmonised with their other garments, a harmony that could be effected through matching textiles, general colour, embroidered detail or buckles. In the eighteenth century, men's shoes matched their clothing in different ways, for example with glossy black, red or pink heels. The shoe of an upper-class man also acted as a type of sign which emphasised the difference between the wearer and young boys and women. The shoe also distinguished him from working men who wore leather or cloth protective leggings, ragged shoes and clogs. The symbolic marking of the entry of a wealthy young man into manhood through his shoes, as well as his other dress, may have been of more importance than has previously been acknowledged in costume history.

Questions 14–20 段落信息匹配题

题号	答案	题干翻译	详细定位句与翻译	详细解释
14	C	一个影响城市地区条件的法律变化的细节	第 C 段： The first legislation concerning paving in London was passed in 1762, and during the following decades similar laws were enacted in many cities. 翻译： 关于伦敦铺设路面的第一项立法于 1762 年通过，在随后的几十年里，许多城市也颁布了类似法律。	题干关键词是 legal change 和 urban areas。原文中的 legislation 和 laws 对应 “legal change”；London 和 many cities 对应 “urban areas”。这项法律与 paving 铺路 有关，直接影响城市街道条件，因此答案是 C。
15	F	提到男性鞋子的重要性曾被专家忽视	第 F 段： The symbolic marking of the entry of a wealthy young man into manhood through his shoes, as well as his other dress, may have been of more importance than has previously been acknowledged in costume history. 翻译： 通过鞋子以及其他服饰来象征一位富有年轻男性进入成年，这一点的重要性，可能比服装史上过去所承认的更大。	题干中的 significance of men’s shoes 对应原文中的 symbolic marking… through his shoes，即男性鞋子的象征意义。has been overlooked by experts 对应 more importance than has previously been acknowledged in costume history，意思是服装史研究中以前没有充分承认这一点。因此答案是 F。
16	D	提到性别如何开始影响鞋子的设计	第 D 段： In the early eighteenth century, the look of men’s and women’s shoes started to diverge in appearance as a distinction between male and female footwear filtered into production. 翻译： 在十八世纪早期，随着男女鞋之间的区别逐渐进入生产过程，男性和女性鞋子的外观开始出现差异。	题干中的 gender 对应原文中的 male and female；began to affect shoe design 对应 started to diverge in appearance 和 filtered into production。也就是说，男女差异开始反映在鞋子的外观和生产设计中，因此答案是 D。
17	A	描述城市地区可能面临的问题	第 A 段： Streets were dirty, rubbish was everywhere and the British climate did not help. Walking could be a risky business. The terrible state of roads, always flooded and muddy… 翻译： 街道很脏，到处都是垃圾，英国的气候也没有帮助。步行可能是一件有风险的事情。糟糕的道路状况，经常积水、泥泞……	题干中的 potential problems faced in urban areas 指城市中可能遇到的困难。第 A 段集中描述了十八世纪伦敦街道的问题：脏、垃圾多、天气差、道路积水泥泞、走路有风险。这些都是城市出行面临的问题，所以答案是 A。
18	E	提到男性鞋子的耐用特性	第 E 段： Men wore more sober footwear, not unlike modern shoes. Their shoes were entirely made of leather, which provided resistance to rain, mud and bad weather. 翻译： 男性穿着更加朴素的鞋子，与现代鞋子并不太不同。他们的鞋子完全由皮革制成，能够抵御雨水、泥浆和恶劣天气。	题干中的 tough qualities 指鞋子结实、耐用、能抵抗恶劣环境。原文说男性鞋子 entirely made of leather，并且 provided resistance to rain, mud and bad weather，说明男性鞋子具备耐雨、耐泥、耐坏天气的特性。因此答案是 E。
19	B	提到伦敦游客所使用的交通方式	第 B 段： For instance, in eighteenth-century London, a sightseer’s experience was restricted to touristic places and involved journeys by a series of boats and coaches. 翻译： 例如，在十八世纪的伦敦，观光者的经历仅限于旅游景点，并且包括乘坐一系列船和马车的旅程。	题干中的 visitors to London 对应原文中的 sightseer，即观光者、游客。modes of transport 对应 boats and coaches，即船和马车。因此答案是 B。
20	A	提到十八世纪早期伦敦当地人能享受步行的有限区域	第 A 段： …the poor condition of the streets did not allow ‘walking for pleasure’ outside private parks or pleasure gardens. 翻译： 街道状况很差，使人们无法在私人公园或游乐花园之外进行“休闲散步”。	题干中的 limited areas 对应原文中的 private parks or pleasure gardens。原文意思是，由于街道条件差，人们只能在这些特定区域里享受散步，而不能随意在街上散步。因此答案是 A。

Questions 21–22 多选题

题目翻译：
作者提到了鞋子和其他服装之间的关系。以下哪两项被提及？

选项	是否正确	选项翻译	详细定位句与翻译	详细解释
A	✅ 正确	富有女性的鞋子被设计成以多种方式与她们的服装搭配。	第 F 段： Wealthy women's footwear harmonised with their other garments, a harmony that could be effected through matching textiles, general colour, embroidered detail or buckles. 翻译： 富有女性的鞋子与她们的其他服装相协调，这种协调可以通过匹配的面料、整体颜色、刺绣细节或鞋扣来实现。	选项中的 rich women 对应原文 wealthy women；match their dress in various ways 对应 matching textiles, general colour, embroidered detail or buckles。原文明确列出了多种搭配方式，所以 A 正确。
B	❌ 错误	男性鞋子往往有大量不同颜色。	第 F 段： In the eighteenth century, men's shoes matched their clothing in different ways, for example with glossy black, red or pink heels. 翻译： 在十八世纪，男性鞋子以不同方式与服装搭配，例如带有亮黑色、红色或粉色鞋跟。	原文只说男性鞋子可以通过 鞋跟颜色 与服装搭配，并举了几个例子：黑色、红色、粉色。选项说 a vast range of colours 大量颜色，范围被夸大了，而且原文说的是 heels 鞋跟，不是整双鞋。因此 B 错误。
C	❌ 错误	儿童鞋是成人鞋的简化版本。	第 F 段相关信息： The shoe of an upper-class man also acted as a type of sign which emphasised the difference between the wearer and young boys and women. 翻译： 上层男性的鞋子也起到一种标志作用，强调穿着者与年轻男孩和女性之间的区别。	原文只是提到男性鞋子能区分成年男性与年轻男孩、女性，并没有说 children's shoes 儿童鞋 是成人鞋的简化版。因此 C 错误。
D	✅ 正确	富有男性的鞋子使穿着者区别于其他群体。	第 F 段： The shoe of an upper-class man also acted as a type of sign which emphasised the difference between the wearer and young boys and women. The shoe also distinguished him from working men... 翻译： 上层男性的鞋子也起到一种标志作用，强调穿着者与年轻男孩和女性之间的区别。这种鞋子还使他区别于劳动阶层男性……	选项中的 wealthy men's shoes 对应原文 upper-class man 的鞋；set the wearer apart from other groups 对应 emphasised the difference 和 distinguished him from working men。原文明确说鞋子体现社会身份和性别/阶层差异，所以 D 正确。
E	❌ 错误	不太富裕的人穿的鞋是时尚设计的廉价仿制品。	第 F 段： ...working men who wore leather or cloth protective leggings, ragged shoes and clogs. 翻译： ……劳动阶层男性穿着皮革或布制的护腿、破旧的鞋子和木屐。	原文提到劳动阶层男性穿 ragged shoes and clogs 破旧的鞋子和木屐，但没有说这些鞋是 cheap copies of fashionable designs 时尚设计的廉价仿制品。这是选项自行添加的信息，因此 E 错误。

Questions 21–22 答案：A、D

Questions 23–26 摘要填空题

题目要求：
从文章中选择 ONE WORD ONLY，每空只填一个词。

题号	答案	题干翻译	详细定位句与翻译	详细解释
23	coach	在伦敦，只有较贫穷的人不得不步行，而不是乘坐一个 _____。	第 B 段： Walking was considered to be an activity for the poorer members of society — or simply those who could not afford a coach. 翻译： 步行被认为是社会中较贫穷成员的活动，或者简单来说，是那些付不起马车费用的人才会做的事。	题干中的 less well-off 对应原文 poorer members of society；had to walk rather than take a... 对应 could not afford a coach。空格前有 a，所以填单数名词 coach。
24	countryside	不过，在 _____，情况是不同的。	第 B 段： This is truer for urban spaces than for places in the countryside, where country life had always been dominated by a lifestyle of outdoor activities. 翻译： 这一点在城市空间中比在乡村地区更为明显，因为乡村生活一直以户外活动的生活方式为主。	前文说早期文本中很少提到步行，尤其是在城市中更是如此；但乡村不同，因为乡村生活本来就以户外活动为主。题干中的 The situation... was different in the... 对应原文 places in the countryside，所以答案是 countryside。
25	pedestrians	根据 Sophie von La Roche 的说法，_____ 的数量大幅增加。	第 C 段： She comments on how many more pedestrians there were on the broad, clean pavements... 翻译： 她评论说，宽阔、干净的人行道上有了多得多的行人……	题干中的 the number of... rose dramatically 对应原文 how many more pedestrians there were。这里指的是行人数量增加，因此答案是复数名词 pedestrians。
26	pavements	因为许多人能够在远离交通的宽阔 _____ 上行走。	第 C 段： ...on the broad, clean pavements, alongside the houses where... many thousands of neatly clad people... pursue their way safe from the carriages, horses and dirt. 翻译： ……在房屋旁边宽阔、干净的人行道上，成千上万衣着整洁的人们可以行走，避开马车、马匹和污物。	题干中的 wide 对应原文 broad；away from the traffic 对应 safe from the carriages, horses and dirt。人们行走的地方是 pavements 人行道，所以答案是 pavements。
